

On April 16th, 2002, the entertainment news website EURweb.com founded by a black top radio DJ, Lee Bailey (you probably remember when Michael Jackson called him for an interview about a music video by Eminem

<http://www.michaeljackson.ch/2004an.htm>

m), posted a story about a document describing what's really going on between Sony Music and Michael Jackson that was getting through to press and news agencies of the world via the web. This document was going round exactly 2 months before the event in London where

Michael Jackson himself would voice many of the things written on it, as you can see in this video recorded that day:

<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=aW1T1DZdWrA>

We can't imagine a better proof for the validity of the document.

Nowadays this story is available only reposted on blogs dedicated to Michael Jackson that give the following link: <http://www.eurweb.com/story/eur6406.cfm> as a source.

After realizing the link is expired, we contacted the EURweb staff by email:

Comment: Hi,

I'd like to know if you can help me recoup somehow your original article: <http://www.eurweb.com/story/eur6406.cfm> whose link is now expired. I found re many sites, but I'd like to have your source dated back April 16 2002.

The article begins with these lines: "Making its way to press and news agencies globally via the Internet is a document that meticulously outlines a nasty le Sony Music and its most famous superstar, Michael Jackson".

Thank you.
